What is SNAP?

The Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (formerly known as food stamps) provides food assistance to families with low or no income in the U.S. It is a federal program administered by the USDA, but distribution of benefits is determined and done on the state level. Households that qualify for SNAP receive an EBT card that can be used at any store that accepts them to purchase groceries.

Why should I apply?

- SNAP is the most effective tool for combating hunger in the US. It's estimated that SNAP reduces poverty in the US by as much as 30%.
- SNAP has been linked to improved education achievement in households where students receive it.
- SNAP is associated with better health outcomes and lower medical costs for recipients.
