Message from the Executive Director and Board President

“People don’t eat in the long run. They eat every day.”

— Harry Hopkins

The words of FDR aide Harry Hopkins are as timely in our current recession as they were seventy years ago...and they resonated throughout 2010 for the Hoosier Hills Food Bank and our partner agencies.

Around us, there were debates and discussions, acclaim and accusations, campaigns and elections, gloomy news stories and glimmers of hope and recovery. All of that is important and much of it is necessary as a democratic society determines its collective priorities and long-term solutions to its problems.

Unfortunately, the cold reality is that all of it is little comfort to the child with an empty tummy, the senior on a fixed income choosing between medicine and groceries, or the person working two part-time jobs to pay the rent and put food on the table.

So, while we’re conscious of the “big picture” and the need for long-term solutions, our priority remains ensuring that people are fed today so that they have the health, and strength, and spirit to thrive in the long run. It was our focus in 2010, and with a great deal of help, we managed to distribute a record amount of food for the fourth year in a row.

Our 2.4% increase, to 3,239,967 pounds comes on the heels of a 29% increase the year before and represents a 97% increase from just five years ago.

To be honest, it’s amazing that we were able to top 2009’s distribution levels at all. We don’t know if we can do it again in 2011 or for how long we can sustain this level of response. While community support was strong in 2010, many sources of both local and national food donations were down. Commodities supplied by the federal government made up the difference.

Our continued ability to respond in this difficult economy depends on whether our community continues to respond with support, and whether our government recognizes that the need has not subsided and maintains necessary programs and funding streams.

Either way, two things are certain. The support provided for the work of the Hoosier Hills Food Bank demonstrates the capacity of human beings to care for one another and the generosity of this community; and we at HHFB intend to continue that work until the last hungry person is fed.

Julio Alonso, Executive Director

Kevin R. Robling, Board of Directors President

HHFB Staff, March 2011

More than 50 million Americans, including more than 17 million children, are food insecure – meaning they lack consistent access to a nutritious, well-balanced diet.

– Household Food Insecurity in the United States, USDA report released November 2010.

Programs & Services

• LOCAL FOOD COLLECTION & DISTRIBUTION

The daily collection and distribution of donated food remains HHFB's most significant initiative. Our drivers visited retail grocery stores, wholesalers, restaurants and other food service operations on a daily basis and we collected food from 136 community food drives in 2010. Our Meal Share prepared food rescue program alone provided the equivalent of nearly 60,000 meals. Nearly 100 agencies obtained food for their programs, including food pantries, soup kitchens, emergency shelters, youth programs and residential shelters.

In addition to donations obtained from our local donors, our membership in Feeding America enabled HHFB to bring over 400,000 pounds of food from national donors into our community and make it available to our agency partners. The support of Perry Township and Monroe County government assisted us in paying the transportation costs of obtaining that donated food. Financial support from a variety of sources also made it possible for us to purchase nearly 200,000 pounds of food in 2010, including grants from the South Central Community Action Program and Feeding Indiana's Hungry.

Our ability to collect and distribute so much food depends on our ability to maintain our infrastructure, including our fleet of vehicles. This ability was threatened by an aging and inadequate fleet that cost us a record amount in repairs that were 46% over budget in 2010. Thankfully, we received welcome news from disparate sources. In October, a new 24' refrigerated box truck with a lift-gate arrived as a gift from the Walmart Foundation in partnership with Feeding America. This vehicle is our primary collection and distribution truck. And, this summer we received word that HHFB had been awarded a TEFAP Infrastructure Grant of $112,199 from the US Department of Agriculture Food & Nutrition Service for the purchase of a new refrigerated box truck with lift-gate. This vehicle, expected to arrive in April, will have the largest payload capacity in our fleet and replace another aging and costly truck.

• FRESH FOODS: GARDEN, GLEANING & PLANT-A-RROW PROGRAMS

While our "fresh food" initiatives only make up about 2% of the total food received last year, it is a very critical part of our efforts to provide more nutritional content in the food we distribute. Over 61,000 pounds of fresh produce came in from four sources. The Plant A Row For the Hungry program is a collaborative effort with the Bloomington Community Farmer's Market, Mother Hubbard's Cupboard and Worms Way; and the HHFB truck is a regular site at the weekly market as vendors there donated more produce than last year.

Our Gleaning Program involved two local farms, Harriman Farms and Stranger's Hill Organics and enabled HHFB staff and volunteers to harvest produce that would otherwise have rotted in the fields.

The summer drought took a toll on our garden at Stranger's Hill and the yield was down to just under 3,000 pounds, but progress was made a number of other garden fronts as we moved forward with building 8 permanent beds and improved our composting process. While numbers were low, quality was high as the garden produced cucumbers, bell peppers, beets, radishes, onions, melons, broccoli and other crops.

The number of garden volunteers increased as 236 people put in over

Martin Luther King Day volunteers pack bulk pasta for distribution to agencies.

Over 100 Comcast Cares Day volunteers packed CSFP boxes, laid gravel, painted barrels and performed other tasks in April.

709 hours of time. This included 33 individuals and 11 groups. An additional 6 individuals and 2 groups logged over 82 hours for the Gleaning Program. Volunteers also helped with composting and computer/graphic design related projects.

We also developed new partnerships with the Bloomington Community Orchard, which will result in future gleaning opportunities; and with Monroe County Parks and Recreation, which will result in a larger, more robust garden program down the road with much improved infrastructure.

We owe gratitude to the Community Foundation of Bloomington and Monroe County, which provided a grant to expand the Garden Program last year.

• USDA PROGRAMS & GOVERNMENT SUPPORT

HHFB administers two US Department of Agriculture (USDA) food distribution programs through an agreement with the Indiana State Department of Health. These federal commodities accounted for 42% of the total food received in 2010 – over 1.3 million pounds.

The Emergency Food Assistance Program (TEFAP) provides staple foods including canned goods, frozen meat, fresh potatoes and tomatoes, boxed pasta, cereal, juice, and shelf stable milk to food pantries, soup kitchens and shelters. Because we're all so dependent on donated food and happy to accept whatever we receive, these staple commodities are critically important to the emergency food assistance network. They provide nutrition and variety. HHFB receives, stores, stages and distributes commodities to 39 agencies in 8 counties. In addition to our six Feeding America service area counties, we distribute TEFAP to agencies in Crawford and Washington counties. TEFAP also requires us to conduct extensive agency monitoring and site visits to ensure compliance with federal and state regulations.

The Commodity Supplemental Food Program (CSFP) is a vital nutrition link for 530 low-income seniors in 3 HHFB counties: Crawford, Orange and Martin. Seniors over 60 with incomes at or below 130% of the federal poverty level are eligible to enroll and there are waiting lists in all three counties. Each month, they receive a 40 pound box of food that includes staples such as cheese, cereal, juice, canned goods, pasta, and shelf stable milk. HHFB receives and stores this food and each month dozens of volunteers help pack and do quality control checks for each distribution.

The reliance that many seniors with no other options have on this source of nutrition was evident this winter when icy road conditions forced us to reschedule delivery dates. As our coordinator and volunteers made hundreds of calls to explain the delay, the worry was evident in the voice of the seniors...as was their relief that we were rescheduling, not cancelling delivery.

Also in 2010, for the first time ever, Congress approved $6 million in TEFAP Infrastructure grants nation-wide to enable emergency food providers to improve their capacity to serve those in need. Through this competitive national grant process, HHFB was one of 39 organizations in 24 states, and the only Indiana organization to receive funding. An award of $112,199.00 has enabled us to purchase a 2012 International 26' refrigerated box truck and lift-gate that is scheduled to be delivered in April.

HHFB also received funding from the Emergency Food & Shelter Program (EFSP), Community Development Block Grant (CDBG), Monroe County Council, Perry Township, Van Buren Township and the City of Bloomington.

“Recession raises U. S. poverty rate to a 15-year high. 1 in 7 struggled in 2009 – Biggest increase is among children.”

– New York Times headline, September 17, 2010.

• FAMILIES FIRST MOBILE PANTRY

Lawrence County's unemployment rate remained one of the highest in the state throughout 2010 and HHFB's mobile pantry helped to meet a high demand for emergency food assistance. Each month, our pantry visits Bedford and Mitchell and sets up shop at a city park shelter and American Legion post.

Mobile pantry saw a substantial increase in clients last year. The average served each month in both cities jumped from 146 households to 224 households and the total pounds of food distributed increased by 116% to nearly 129,000 pounds.

An additional 37,895 pounds of mobile pantry food were distributed in Monroe County during weekly visits to low-income housing developments of the Bloomington Housing Authority.

• VOLUNTEER SUPPORT

Donations of time are as important to HHFB as are food and financial donations. With six tons of food a day going out of the warehouse, it would be impossible for our small staff to keep the food bank going without the support of volunteers. LOTS of volunteers.

Last year, 1,770 people volunteered at Hoosier Hills Food Bank, providing over 6,270 hours of service with a value of over $70,500.

These folks came from all walks of life – college and high school students, senior citizens, professionals, individuals, families, groups and businesses. They provided the oversight and policy direction on our board of directors, repacked Meal Share food, packed up CSFP boxes, worked in the warehouse and the office, toiled in the garden, gleaned from farmer's fields, laid stone in our parking lot, collected canned goods and maintained our computer system.

Some came every week or every month, some came just once. Alone or with friends and business colleagues. They were here throughout the year for the ongoing work we do and here for special occasions like "A Day On, Not a Day Off", celebrating Dr. Martin Luther King's legacy; for United Way of Monroe County Day of Action, and for Comcast Cares Day.

• OUTREACH & SPECIAL EVENTS

2010 was full of special days for HHFB. Our long-time partnership with IU Athletics resulted in another successful Hoosier Hysteria food drive. Go Hoosiers! The annual Stamp Out Hunger Food Drive, sponsored by the National Association of Letter Carriers and US Postal Service was again our largest single food drive, stocking the shelves for months. Homeward Bound and Crop Walk raised both money and awareness. And the 16th Annual Soup Bowl benefit brought nearly 700 people to the Bloomington Convention Center to sample soup from nearly 50 restaurants, claim a bowl made by one of dozens of talented potters, listen to the African American Choral Ensemble and raise over $70,000 for HHFB programs.

Our Volunteer Recognition Reception in June provided an opportunity to thank our many volunteers, partners and supporters, with the sponsorship of Sodexo and the IMU Tudor Room. Our 2010 honorees included Senator Richard Lugar, the Soup Bowl Organizing Committee, Bloomington Hospital, Mother's Cupboard, Stranger's Hill Organics, and T.J. Deckard.

We celebrated our 28th birthday on November 18 as Bloomington Mayor

Mark Kruzan and United Way Executive Director Barry Lessow helped us welcome the newest member of the food bank family – Wally! Bloomington Walmart Manager Jeremy O’Leary presented us with the keys to a brand new 24’ refrigerated box truck, a gift from the Walmart Foundation in collaboration with Feeding America.

HHFB was honored by the talents of local artist Joe Lee, who designed our annual Thanksgiving appeal ad, which is co-sponsored by the Bloomington Herald-Times and Bedford Times-Mail. Joe’s drawing was such a great representation of the roots of community support that allow HHFB’s efforts to bear fruit through the work of our partner agencies that we have adapted it for use in thank you cards and certificates for our donors.

Finally, while members of our staff made numerous presentations, tours and speaking engagements during the year, our most important education effort is the annual Children’s Art Calendar. Our staff spoke with multiple grade school classes about hunger and HHFB’s efforts to end it and over 100 young students made drawings based on that experience. After a very difficult selection process, twelve were chosen for our calendar, the first ever in full color! The calendar includes hunger and agency statistics and is used to say thank you to our food donors.

• DONORS AND SUPPORT

HHFB relies on the generosity of the community to sustain our efforts. In addition to the volunteers who donate their time, many segments of the community provide the financial support needed to pay the staff, fuel the trucks, light the warehouse, run the cooler and freezer, buy supplies, purchase food and cover the costs of insurance, financial audits, trash removal, pest control and the many other expenses associated with our operations.

Private support through fundraising, donations, United Way donors and grants made up 63% of our revenue last year. Approximately 15% came from USDA program reimbursements and 5% from other government sources including the Emergency Food & Shelter Program, Community Development Block Grant, and local government grants. The balance included agency shared maintenance contributions and interest income.

Over 1,200 individuals, businesses, groups and organizations made financial donations to HHFB in 2010. In past years, we have listed these supporters in our annual report. However, an increasing number of donors have requested anonymity and the advent of electronic media has made it more difficult to protect the privacy of our donors and limit the sharing of their names as our donor policy requires. Therefore we have opted not to include a full list of financial donors in this year’s report. We regret that this means that many fine people who support our work do not receive recognition, but we felt it more important to protect the privacy of our donors and to reduce the expense of producing this report.

Food donors are also absolutely essential to our ability to distribute 3.2 million pounds of food. Over 300 of them provided support in 2010. Over half of the food we received last year came in the form of donations, with USDA commodities making up another 42% and direct food purchases 6%.

Our food donors range from the individual who places a can of food in a food drive bin to Walmart, which was our largest single donor at over 243,000 pounds. Substantial special donations of high quality product came several times in 2010: 2,400 loaves of bread from Aunt Millie’s Bakeries; 11,000 pounds of ground pork from the Indiana Pork Producers' Million Meals Program; 5,400 dozen eggs from Rose Acre Farms and over 3,700 gallons of milk through a grant from the South Central Community Action Program.

Tree of Life, Kroger, Sam's Club, Bloomingfoods Market & Deli, Troyer Food Service and Target were just some of the many local donors providing large quantities of donated food last year. And the Indiana Memorial Union Tudor Room was our largest Meal Share donor at nearly 18,000 pounds.

Board President Kevin R. Robling and Executive Director Julio Alonso accept Kroger's annual gift to the food bank from Kroger representative and HHFB board member Kent Clark.

Notes On Financial Statements

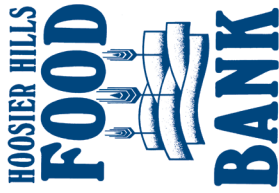

HHFB's financial statements are audited annually by a Certified Public Accounting firm. The 2010 audit will be conducted in early summer and therefore these are unaudited numbers. The audit will apply generally accepted accounting principles and will include the value of donated food, which is not included here. Please note that the income and expense statement is not an accurate measure of cash flow as it includes items such as the value of truck donation (over $87,000) as income. Once the annual audit is completed, HHFB will file Form 990 with the Internal Revenue Service and the form will be posted on our website and made available to any interested parties.
